

WHY GOD ALLOWS BATTLE BEFORE BREAKTHROUGH

A journey of faith, perseverance, obedience, and trusting God through difficult seasons.

CHARLES OWUSU

A NOTE TO THE READER

This book is written for anyone walking through a difficult season and wondering whether God is still present. May these pages encourage you to hold on to faith, remain obedient, and trust God even when the path is unclear.

“The battle may be part of the journey, but it does not have to be the end of your story.”

May your faith become stronger in the process.

INTRODUCTION

When the Battle Comes Before the Blessing

Psalm 46:1

There are seasons in life when you pray for breakthrough, but instead of seeing immediate answers, you find yourself facing battles. You may wonder, “God, if You are with me, why is this happening?”

The Bible shows us that difficult seasons do not automatically mean that God has abandoned us. Joseph faced betrayal before the palace. David faced opposition before the throne. The Israelites faced the Red Sea before their deliverance. Jesus Himself endured the cross before the resurrection.

A battle can become a place where faith grows, character is formed, obedience is tested, and dependence on God becomes deeper. This does not mean every painful event is directly caused by God. It means God can work through difficult circumstances and bring purpose out of them.

Your battle is not necessarily the end of your story. Sometimes it is the place where God prepares you for what comes next.

CHAPTER ONE

The Battle Does Not Mean God Has Left You

One of the greatest lies we can believe during hardship is that God has forgotten us.

When circumstances become difficult, feelings can become louder than faith. But feelings change; God's character does not.

Psalm 46:1 reminds us that God is our refuge and strength, an ever-present help in trouble. Notice that it says "in trouble," not only after trouble.

God's presence is not proved by the absence of problems. Sometimes His presence is experienced most deeply while we are walking through them.

Do not measure God's love by today's circumstances. Hold on to His promises even when you cannot yet see the outcome.

CHAPTER TWO

Some Battles Build Your Faith

Faith that has never been tested can remain only an idea. Trials give us opportunities to trust God when we do not have all the answers.

James 1:2-4 teaches that the testing of faith produces perseverance. The goal is not that suffering itself is good, but that God can use difficult seasons to develop spiritual maturity.

A battle may teach you to pray when you previously depended only on yourself. It may teach patience when you wanted immediate results. It may teach you to trust God's timing rather than forcing your own.

When you are being stretched, do not assume you are being destroyed. Sometimes you are being strengthened.

CHAPTER THREE

The Wilderness Before the Promise

The wilderness is a powerful picture in Scripture. Israel had a promised destination, but they still had to walk through a wilderness.

The wilderness was uncomfortable, but it became a place of learning. They learned about dependence, provision, obedience, and God's presence.

There may be a wilderness season in your own life. It may feel slow, lonely, or confusing. But a season of preparation is not necessarily a season of rejection.

Do not despise the process. God can use the journey to prepare you for the responsibility that comes with the promise.

CHAPTER FOUR

When Your Faith Is Tested

There are moments when God seems silent. You pray, wait, and wonder why nothing appears to change.

Faith is not pretending that everything is easy. Faith is choosing to trust God even when you cannot see the whole picture.

Abraham had to wait. Joseph had to endure years of difficulty. David had to run from danger. Their stories remind us that waiting does not mean God is inactive.

During testing, keep praying. Keep reading God's Word. Keep doing what is right. Do not abandon your faith simply because the answer has not arrived yet.

CHAPTER FIVE

Obedience in the Middle of the Battle

Breakthrough is not an excuse to abandon obedience. In fact, difficult seasons often reveal whether we will obey God only when things are comfortable.

Obedience means doing what God has instructed even when the result is not immediately visible.

Noah built before the rain came. Abraham moved because God called him. The disciples followed Jesus without knowing every detail of the journey.

Your responsibility is obedience. God's responsibility is the outcome. Keep your hands faithful and leave the results in His hands.

CHAPTER SIX

Do Not Let the Battle Change Your Identity

A difficult season can tempt you to define yourself by your circumstances.

If you fail, you may call yourself a failure. If you are rejected, you may believe you are unwanted. If you are delayed, you may believe you are forgotten.

But your circumstances do not have the final authority over your identity.

You are called to remember who you are in Christ. Romans 8:37 speaks of being more than conquerors through Him who loved us.

The battle may describe what you are experiencing, but it does not have to define who you are.

CHAPTER SEVEN

The Power of Waiting on God

Waiting is difficult because we prefer control. We want dates, explanations, and immediate answers.

Yet Isaiah 40:31 teaches that those who wait on the Lord renew their strength.

Biblical waiting is not passive hopelessness. It is active trust. While you wait, pray. While you wait, prepare. While you wait, grow. While you wait, remain faithful.

God's timing may not match your schedule, but delayed does not automatically mean denied. Let the waiting season develop patience and deeper confidence in God.

CHAPTER EIGHT

When the Breakthrough Finally Comes

When the battle ends and breakthrough comes, remember the God who carried you through it.

Do not only celebrate the destination; remember the lessons learned along the way.

Joseph did not forget where he came from. David knew that God had delivered him. The disciples remembered what Jesus had done.

Your testimony can become encouragement for someone who is still in the battle.

When God brings you through, give Him the glory. Use your story to strengthen someone else. What you survived may become part of another person's hope.

REFLECTION

Take a moment to slow down and honestly reflect on what God may be teaching you in your current season.

1. What battle are you currently facing?
2. What has this season taught you about your faith?
3. Is there an area where God is calling you to obedience?
4. What Scripture can you hold onto while you wait?
5. Are you allowing your circumstances to define your identity?
6. How can you continue trusting God even before you see the breakthrough?
7. When breakthrough comes, how will you give God the glory?

CLOSING PRAYER

Heavenly Father,

Thank You for being with me in every season. When I face battles, help me not to believe that You have abandoned me.

Give me strength when I am tired, faith when I cannot see, patience when I must wait, and courage to obey You.

Teach me what You want me to learn in this season. Protect my heart from fear, bitterness, and discouragement.

Help me remember that my battle is not the end of my story. Let my life become a testimony of Your faithfulness.

When my breakthrough comes, help me never to forget the God who carried me through the battle.

In Jesus' name, Amen.
